Note generali	Meant to function only as an advertising device for a new publishing house, the Chap-Book began its brief but impressive life. The magazine was published at first in Cambridge, but moved to Chicago when interest in it became apparent. Excellent short fiction and poetry appeared. Stephen Crane, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Thomas B. Aldrich, and many others were among the contributors. Cf. American periodicals, 1741-1900. Title from cover.
